Examples of Possible Roadside Adjustments

Some ditches may shift due to the widening. Affected culverts or drainage pipes under driveways may need to be relocated or replaced. The contractor will work with the property owners to minimize inconvenience during the work.

Mailboxes will be relocated and reinstalled to meet U.S. Postal Service guidelines.

Some roadside slopes will require rock lining to minimize the need for additional right of way. The rock lining will also minimize erosion.

New ditches and embankments will be required throughout the project. Some trees and brush on the right of way may need to be removed.

Utility structures and facilities will be relocated or adjusted as required.
